BRAKEMAN DEAD ONE MAN HURT IN PENNSY WRECK

FAST FREIGHT SIDESWIPED BY WRECKER'S CRANE IN EAST
NEWARK.

CHARLES HULL WAS KILLED

Wreck Train on Siding Allowed the Crane to Project Over Track.
Heavy Property Loss.

One of the most disastrous wrecks that has occurred in the railroad yards of Newark in recent years, happened at 3 o'clock Saturday morning, when Pennsylvania freight extra 2204, crashed into a Pennsylvania crane car, and Craneman Charles Hull, 23 years old of Columbus, was killed and a brakeman named Porter was slightly injured.

The crane train in charge of Engineer Bancroft and Conductor Brennan, was standing on the north siding and it is claimed, showed no lights, and it is said the crane swung over the next track. Extra 2204, a fast freight loaded with merchandise, in charge of Engineer Harcourt and Conductor Myers, was rushing along at a high rate of speed when the engine of the freight struck the crane. Instantly everything was confusion, the boiler of the freight engine was smashed in, the headlight and smokestack swept away and the side of the engine badly bent and broken.

The crane car was knocked around and upset the freight's tender, four box cars and one gondola, were broken like kindling and piled up, blocking four tracks. The trainmen rushed to the front of the train and picked up the mangled and bleeding body of the young craneman, but a search showed that aside from a severe shaking up none of the train's crew had been injured to any extent. Brakeman Porter was thrown from a box car, but aside from a few bruises was not injured.

Flagmen were posted up and down the track and a call sent to the depot for wreck trains. Wreckers were rushed to the scene from Stenbenville and Dennison from the Panhandle lines, and the B. and O. wreck train from this city was also sent to assist in clearing up the debris. The crews of the wreckers worked all night and cleared the tracks enough for an early passenger train to Columbus to get through. The body of young Hull was placed on the train and sent to Columbus in care of his father.

A gang of salvage men was also placed at work to save what merchandise they could out of the wreck, and a great deal of smaller stuff was saved, although a vast quantity was lost and the loss has not been estimated. Most of the stuff in the wrecked cars was of a small order, toys and china were being the principal loss. The tracks were also torn up to a great extent and the construction crew reached the scene of the disaster about 9 o'clock and commenced relaying the tracks.

The accident occurred half a mile east of the Heisey glass plant, and was visited Saturday morning by hundreds of people, who collected all kinds of souvenirs of the smash-up.

FLEET TO PACIFIC NEXT DECEMBER

Washington, Aug. 24.—Throwing aside all concealment and subterfuges Secretary Loeb has at last made a definite announcement that the Atlantic fleet of sixteen battleships is going to the Pacific ocean. Added to this it is also disclosed that the fleet will go by way of the Straits of Magellan instead of by the Suez canal and that they will start some time in December. The Magellan route was selected to that the big South American cities could see Uncle Sam's big sea fighters.

Announcement from Yokohama that Japan is organizing the Hong Kong squadron in addition to her present South China squadron which is stationed at Shanghai is believed here to be that country's answer to the move of the United States in sending battleships to the Pacific. Hong Kong is the nearest Chinese port to the Philippines. The new squadron will, however not be formed for over a year.

CHILDREN HURT BY EXPLOSION OF SHELL FROM MAINE

Jersey City, N. J., Aug. 24.—Three children are under the care of doctors here today suffering from severe injuries as the result of the explosion of a pound and a quarter shell, a souvenir of the wrecked battleship Maine. Ellen Kenney, 11, was struck in the hand, hip and side and it was necessary to amputate the shattered hand. Grace Huddell, 12, was struck in the right side, and also received bad burns. George O'Rourke, 6, caught a piece of the shell in his side and hand.

A sailor of the Maine had given the shell to Kenney's father. He understood the charge had been withdrawn and allowed the children to play with it. Ellen dropped the shell several times on a sidewalk to show a crowd of children how heavy it was.

FROM DIE WOLFE

THE VILLA MOLITOR IN BADEN-BADEN.

Intense interest was taken in the recent trial at Baden-Baden of Karl Hau, professor at George Washington university, Washington, D. C., on the charge of murdering his mother-in-law, Frau Molitor, in that city, in an unfrequented street. The testimony was sensational, and the conviction of Hau provoked a great tumult in Baden-Baden, where the accused man had strangely acquired a large number of admirers.

WOULD PREVENT POSSIBLE PANIC

Secretary Cortelyou's Plan to Afford
Relief to Money Market.

OFFICIAL STATEMENT MADE

Government Funds to Be Placed Each Week During Crop-Moving Period
at Various Points in the Country.
Scheme Will Prevent Acute Monetary Stringency.

New York, Aug. 24.—A new plan of depositing government funds in New York, Boston and other cities to afford relief of the money market in the coming crop movement period has been announced by George B. Cortelyou, secretary of treasury. Beginning next week he will place each week at such points in the country as he shall designate, government funds to such an amount as he deems sufficient to prevent an acute monetary stringency and possible panic, when the demand for money is greatest, at the height of the crop-moving period.

The present financial situation has occupied Secretary Cortelyou's attention for some time, and he is doing what he can to bring relief. Notwithstanding a heavy demand for the $20,000,000 Panama bonds, which are still unissued, the secretary declines to place them on sale, as the government does not need the money, and their purchase by the banks and public would tie up many millions of dollars. Secretary Cortelyou has developed the plan after a long study of the many problems to be considered. The plan is one which the secretary hopes will find general favor in the business world. He has kept close watch at his summer home in Huntington, L. I., of developments in the world's money markets, and he decided to take action at once to prevent, insofar as he is able under the law, the possibility of a panic this fall when the west is drawing heavily upon the east for funds to move crops.

Secretary Cortelyou's plan is all his own. He consulted with no one regarding it. Investigation of the results attained under the old treasury plan of waiting until the last moment and then placing a large single amount in New York disclosed that as a rule this act, while it really helped, generally came either too soon or too late.

Under the new plan the secretary will place government funds in some large enough to meet the situation. For this purpose he may deposit all custom funds which he is permitted to under the Aldrich act, and if these are not sufficient he will augment them from the treasury balance, which increases each week after the usual July deficit.

REPUBLICANS WANT CONTROL OF NEW STATE

TAFT'S TRIP TO OKLAHOMA
CITY IS WITH THAT END
IN VIEW.

Taft is Chief Speaker at Big Political Meeting in the West Today.

Oklahoma City, Okla., Aug. 24.—The determination of the Republicans to control the new state of Oklahoma took form in the opening of the campaign today, with Secretary Taft as the chief speaker. To see the war minister, the greatest crowd ever gathered in this city was at the depot when the reception committee of leading Republicans greeted him this morning.

After a conference at the hotel with the leading citizens, Taft was taken around the city. A parade through the principal streets was given this afternoon and tonight the secretary will deliver an address upon National and Territorial issues.

AGED MAN ASKS HEAVY DAMAGES

Hamilton, O., Aug. 24.—A short time ago, Mrs. Jane Brumbaugh, wife of Dr. N. E. Brumbaugh, a well-known rural physician, was brought to the home of her sister, Mrs. Amanda Drayer, by her two brothers. Now Dr. Brumbaugh brings suit against the Bairds and Mrs. Drayer for $10,000 damages for alleged alienation of his wife's society and affections. He says they prejudiced his wife against him by conspiracy, telling her that he was untrue and unfaithful to her. They have been married 46 years, the husband being 70 and the wife 72.

WILL SECY. ROOT LEAVE CABINET?

New York, Aug. 24.—Wall Street expects Secretary of State Elihu Root to retire from the cabinet in the near future, following the publication of facts concerning his differences with President Roosevelt over the President's course toward corporations. It is understood that Secretary Root will spend two more weeks at Muldoon's health resort, a week at Washington and then leave on a trip to Mexico.

FIVE DEAD IN FIRE AND TWO BURNED

Entire Family Caught in Home by a Fire Which is a Mystery.

Boston, Mass., Aug. 24.—Mrs. Martin Cooper and three children and Cooper's father-in-law, John Dwyer, are dead, and Cooper himself and his three months old baby are apparently fatally burned by a fire which last night partially destroyed their home. Firemen thought all the family had escaped and after the flames were extinguished, seven bodies were found in the beds in the lower rooms. The fire is supposed to have been caused by Cooper and a boarder upsetting a lamp during a scuffle, but why the Coopers did not escape as did the boarder, is a mystery.

MONEY TIGHT Trading in Wool Quieter, but Prices Are Firm.

Boston, Aug. 24.—Trading in wool is quieter, due to tight money market. Prices are firm and not in the least affected. There is no pressure to sell on the part of dealers. A strong feature of the situation is the desire of manufacturers for prompt shipments of wool bought, showing, it is believed, a condition of stock at the mills which points to large future business. A fair volume of business this week in lots of 10,000 to 250,000 pounds each shows full prices realized. Fine and half-bloods are in special good request, selling at 70 to 75 cents for fine and 70 to 72 cents for half-blood. Liberal sales of Ohio fine delaine at 28½ cents for washed and 31 for unwashed, represent the selling basis for this grade.

BLACK HAND BLAMED FOR TWO MURDERS

Coaldale, Pa., Aug. 24.—A double murder, for which the Black Hand is held responsible, was committed on the streets of this place, and adds another crime to the long list that has been committed in this neighborhood by unknown persons. While Frank Peknolas and Samuel Ambrose, miners, were walking together, they were attacked by several men, and before they could offer effective resistance they were stabbed to death. Peknolas' throat was cut almost from ear to ear and Ambrose received a knife wound that pierced his heart. As robbery was not the motive and as the Black Hand has been active in this section, the crime is supposed to be the work of that mysterious band. It is known that Peknolas and Ambrose had expressed fear of vengeance at the hands of enemies.

GOV. TAYLOR WILL BREAK SILENCE IN THE GOEBEL CASE

ISSUES FIRST PUBLIC STATE-MENT SINCE HIS DEPARTURE FROM KENTUCKY.

CORRUPTION AT THE TRIAL

Makes Ugly Charges Against Prosecutor Robert B. Franklin—Says
Jury Was Packed.

Frankfort, Ky., Aug. 24.—Commonwealth Attorney R. B. Franklin, after reading the statement of former Governor Taylor, said today: "Taylor evidently realized that he is at last forced to say something to counteract the effect of the sentiment in the country at large, that he should return to testify. Immune from arrest while in Kentucky for that purpose, and undertakes, after two weeks since the immunity proposition was made by this statement, to again prejudice the people of the country in his favor by rehearsing the false charge against the Kentucky courts and its officials generally, which he and his associates charged with this crime have made from the beginning."

"Taylor refers to his deposition. That deposition was taken in Indiana upon written questions filed in the Scott circuit court and sent to Indiana by mail. Neither Caleb Powers nor any representative of the commonwealth of Kentucky, under the law, was, or could have been present when Taylor appeared before the Indiana officer to answer those questions. Taylor does not fear that the terms of immunity will be violated. What he fears is a cross examination in open court before the country. He fears that such an examination would as I stated in my letter to Governor Beckham on this subject, make plain one or the other of two facts, possibly both. First, that the contentions of the commonwealth with reference to the conspiracy that culminated in the murder of William Goebel are correct; or, second, that Taylor himself is absolutely unworthy of belief."

Indianapolis, Aug. 24.—A signed statement has been issued by William S. Taylor, former governor of Kentucky, whose extradition has been sought by the authorities of that state since the assassination of Governor William Goebel, seven years ago. Taylor says this statement is the first public statement that he has made since leaving his native state. He first dissects the promise of immunity, said to have been offered him recently should he testify in the Powers case, and then makes a proposition to the Kentucky authorities to return to his home state and stand trial on the charge against himself if granted certain guarantees. Mr. Taylor says:

"For more than seven years I have borne in silence the slanders and persecutions of those who robbed me of what heaven knows was my own, and who, to conceal that crime against liberty, and for no other reason, indicted and drove me into exile. I trust an indulgent public will permit me now to break that silence."

"Commonwealth Attorney Robert B. Franklin knows that I have fully testified in the Powers case, by deposition. This testimony is a part of the record of the case, and is accessible to him at all times. He knows too that he had a right to cross-examine me at the time I gave it, and did not do so. He knows that neither he nor any other officer or combination of officers in Kentucky has the legal power to grant such immunity, and that were I to return under such promise of immunity, I would at once be arrested, denied bail and, like Mr. Powers, be subjected to nothing less than a mock trial by a partisan court, before a packed jury, and with a $100,000 corruption fund as a powerful incentive to conviction. The law is clear that Mr. Franklin or any other officer has no power to promise immunity."

"If Commonwealth Attorney Robert B. Franklin will cause what remains of the $100,000 corruption fund to be returned to the treasury of Kentucky, no part of it to be used in these prosecutions, thus putting my case on the same footing as other criminal cases; will guarantee that all trial juries in my case shall be composed of six upright Democrats and a like number of upright Republicans; will guarantee that bail will be granted me within the limits of $100,000; will dismiss the indictments against all parties used as prosecuting witnesses, except myself, leaving them free to testify without fear, coercion or restraint; last, but by no means least, will by mutual agreement select an able, upright and impartial judge to try my case, I will, without any promise of immunity, voluntarily and gladly return to Kentucky, not only to testify in the Powers case, but to submit myself to trial before a jury of my native state."

ANARCHISTS IN CONVENTION AT AMSTERDAM

Amsterdam, Aug. 24.—Called together to watch the International Congress of Anarchists which began today at Amsterdam, is the temporary abiding place of the greatest assemblage of secret service agents, detectives and police spies that has collected in one place in years.

No attempt will be made to interfere with the congress but it will be kept under constant surveillance. Notice has been served on the delegates that no insulting references to rulers, and no violence, will be tolerated in speeches.

TWO CENT FARE IS INVOLVED IN SUIT

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 24.—Though the injunction suits now in the federal court in which the state has been made a defendant are principally directed at the commodity rate law, the two cent passenger law is also involved, and in anticipation of a hard contest, Attorney General Young and his assistants have just compiled figures covering the passenger law. They show that the two-cent passenger law, instead of being confiscatory, is directly the reverse. The figures are the road's own compilations, furnished at the request of railway and warehouse commission. The figures furnished the commission are the passenger revenues for the months of May and June, the two months that the two-cent law became effective, and compared with an average two months business for the previous year, show a marked increase for all roads with the exception of three, the " Soo", Minneapolis and St. Louis and the Chicago and Great Western.

He was so young when he was kidnapped that he had almost forgotten that he ever had a home.

SUMMER STREET COSTUME.

The above design shows a development in blue chambray. The very distinctive feature of the waist lies in the fact that the Japanese sleeves and body are cut in one. This gives a novel appearance as well as producing the broad-shoulder effect. The design of wash braid on each side of the front gives the jumper quite a pretty finish. The same idea is carried out in the back. The skirt is made plain, nine gores, having a design of the braid in each gore.

The color scheme of red and green was tastefully carried out. The centerpiece, a floral crescent, was arranged with gladioli and fern leaves and the lights were shaded with the favored colors.

The guests present were: Misses Kate Johnson, Helen Crane, Julia Braunhold, Emma Davis, Dora Scheidler, and Mabel Phillips; Messrs. Walter Davis, Paul Collins, Horner, George Upson, Ralph Davis, George Hermann, Wordsworth Gard, and Mr. and Mrs. Walter Daugherty.

CLEARINGS

Note Normal Settlements Through the Banks—Dun's.

New York, Aug. 24.—R. G. Dun & Company's weekly review of trade says: Bank clearings maintain a steady volume, denoting normal settlements through the banks, total exchanges this week at all the leading cities in the United States outside New York being $801,337,478, an increase of 7.3 per cent over last year and 22.1 per cent over the corresponding week of 1905. There is a large loss at New York city, due entirely to the fact that unusual speculative activity prevailed in the Wall street markets a year ago, and the trifling loss at Boston and Philadelphia is also a reflection of this. Otherwise there is generally a considerable increase, notably still in the west. Compared with 1905 the August statement is quite as satisfactory as the preceding months.

State of Trade.

New York, Aug. 24.—Jobbing markets, says Dun's review, are well attended by interior buyers and country merchants, who operate with freedom considering the financial stringency which has compelled the postponement of much contemplated structural work. Yet, many western and southern cities report building operations in excess of last year and as the harvests progress there is more disposition to increase preparations for future needs. Retail stocks have been depleted by the customary bargaining sales and preparations for fall and winter trade indicate confidence, but reports from Canada indicate many requests for renewals.

HAVE PAPER FOLLOW YOU.

If you are going away from home this summer you can have the Daily Advocate follow you on your travels without any extra expense. The address will be changed as often as you desire. To receive the Advocate while away from the city is like getting a letter daily from home.

May Take Official Count.

Memphis, Tenn., Aug. 24.—It may take the official count to decide the result of the primary election in Mississippi for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination. Returns are being received slowly and the official count will probably not be given out until Monday. The returns at hand indicate that Noel and Brewer are running a close race. Advice from Jackson say that the Noel committee claims the state by 2,000 majority, while the Brewer committee claim their man has won by more than 1,000 votes.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces. We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

WEDDINGS.

BRISON-INGRAM.

Miss Hattie Ingram, a charming young lady of Wilson street, and Mr. Frank Brison of Millersport, were married at the home of her brother in Columbus Wednesday afternoon. An informal reception was held at her home Friday evening. The bride has a host of friends to wish her happiness. She received many beautiful and useful presents.

AMERICANS CLOSE GREAT ENGAGEMENT

Stock Company at Idlewild Broke House Records—Company an Excellent One.

Despite the fact that the night was bad, a large audience went to the Casino last night to see the American in "Mary Jane," a rural comedy of excellent merit. The show was good and of a good mixture of comedy and melodrama, and went well.

Miss Nancy Boyer took the part of "Mary Jane," and as usual was clever and played her part well. V. A. Varney as the old farmer, the proprietor of the "Buckeye Tavern," was the hit of the show and brought out well his abilities as an actor. Arthur Chatterton as "Walter Walling" was good, but had a part that in a way disappointed his audience who are used to seeing him in the "hero parts." Mary Enos as "Gertie," wife of Walling, was exceptionally good. Jack Warburton who has warmed his way into the hearts of Newark audiences, took the part of "Charlie," the confidential clerk of "Daniel Walling." Henry Testa, in a clever manner, Mr. Testa was good and showed up well in a part other than the heavy. Milton Byron was at his best as "John Jerome," a man who lived by his wits.

This afternoon and tonight "The Mysteries of New York" will be presented, and will probably draw a big house, as it is the last night of this excellent company in this city. However they will return next February and will be eagerly welcomed by Newark audiences.

The company is an exceptionally clever one and well balanced. It is managed by one of the most affable men on the road today, Arthur E. Herbst, a man of large experience in theatrical affairs. Mr. Herbst as well as the company made hosts of friends while in the city, and by his unfailing courtesy made a reputation in the city that many a manager might well envy.

The company will leave tonight for Fort Wayne, Ind., to play an engagement and if they break all house records there as they did here they can rest well on laurels honestly earned.

The saloon keepers of Macon, Ga., have been given permission to keep open an hour later at night in order to work off their stocks before the Prohibition law goes into effect.

GOVERNOR HARRIS ATTENDS SHOOT

Sergeant Orr Still Among Leaders at Meeting of Rifle Experts at Port Clinton.

Camp Perry, O., Aug. 24.—Governor Harris is here to see the shooting of rifle experts of the United States army and national guard, who are assembled for the annual tournament of the rifle association.

The country's best shots have for three days been throwing steel-jacketed projectiles at paper targets for honors and medals.

The galaxy of sharpshooters is probably the most select that ever shot over a range, for it includes the men who have made reputations with small arms in various departments of Uncle Sam's army and navy, as well as the elite of the national guardsmen.

Matches of all sorts are on the program, from individual to team shoots, and a number of prizes, including some with famous histories, are the trophies for which the boys in khaki are burning smokeless powder.

One of the greatest shots at the range is Major Winder, inspector of the small arms practice of the Ohio guard and one of the foremost sharpshooters in the land.

After Friday's shoot the nine leaders rank as follows: Winder, Ohio, 590; Benedict, Ohio, 585; Hudson, New York, 584; Bryant, New York, 577; Semon, Ohio, 573; Casey, Delaware, 572; Orr, Ohio, 571; Tewes, New Jersey, 568; Chisholm, Ohio, 566; Richards, Ohio, 556; Eastman, Ohio, 556; Beecher, Ohio, 548; Emerson, Ohio, 545; and South Ohio, 540.

MARVELOUS INVENTION CURES WEAK MEN

Patent Granted by the United States Government.

A new and scientific appliance invented by L. B. Hawley, M.D., will produce full manly power at first application. The effects are immediate and startling to a high degree. Develops, strengthens and cures loss of vigor. Positively no failures. Physicians endorse and use it in their practice. If you are the least skeptical as to the value of this remarkable treatment, send for illustrated circulars, take them to your family physician and get his opinion. This is the first time any one has requested you to take his circulars to your family physician. Why? Simply because he knows your physician will not recommend his treatment. Not so with this appliance. Your doctor will immediately grasp the idea, and when he does, he will recommend it. Nothing like it has ever been sold before. It works the same on every individual. Send to-day for free descriptive circular of this wonderful instrument. The moment you see it you will realize its possibilities. No C. O. D. or free trial schemes to catch the unwary. This is a plain business proposition that will appeal to you as the greatest opportunity ever offered to those who are weak. Address L. B. Hawley, M.D., 1291 Granite Building, Rochester, N. Y.

To make a clean sweep in a political sense it is necessary to raise the dust first.

A ROYAL HEART BREAKER FAILS TO PAY BILLS

Broken Hearts and Unpaid Board Bills Bring Syrian Prince Into Limelight.

New York, Aug. 24.—Prince Karl Zai-Zai Bey, of Syria, who has figured in any number of picturesque romances since his arrival in this country, and has been the lion of many social leaders, has disappeared. The fact that the prince's wardrobe is held at the Hotel Breslin for an unpaid board bill, is assigned by some heartless people as the cause for his suddenly dropping out of sight. But his society friends firmly believe the story told them that the prince has sailed for Europe on a brief tour. A boarding house keeper where the prince stopped for a while, after leaving the Breslin, only to depart again with still another unpaid bill to his "credit," declares the distinguished Syrian is in New York. She would like to find him. The prince is said to have left a trail of broken hearts from Washington to New York and back to Pittsburg.

SOCIALISTIC DEMONSTRATION

RESULTS IN BANISHMENT OF ENGLISH SUBJECT FROM GERMANY.

Called Hague Peace Conference as a "Thieves' Supper"—Hundreds

Stuttgart, Germany, Aug. 24.—Escorted to the railway station by his comrades and hailed as the hero of the international socialistic convention now in session here, Quetch, the English delegate, ordered to leave Wurttemberg for referring to the Hague peace conference as a "thieves' supper," has left here for England.

The demonstration in Quetch's honor continued from early evening when he was ordered by the police to leave the country, until his actual departure. His hotel was the rendezvous of the socialists during the night. The delegates crowded into shower congratulations on their "persecuted" comrade and an impromptu concert was given, the Marsellaise being sung over and over again. Socialistic speeches completed the program.

Yesterday hundreds of the delegates accompanied Quetch to the station for a final farewell. Even outside the ranks of the socialists Quetch is hailed as a hero and martyr. Townspeople by the hundred came to meet him, requesting his photograph and autograph. Similar requests have poured in from all over the country.

Quetch's objectionable remark was made in a speech on Wednesday and he was ordered to apologize. This he declined to do. He said the French translator of his speech had made him call The Hague delegates "thieves" and "murderers," when his words had not meant this. He declared he should not be held to account for the blunder of the translator.

Quetch's expulsion offers the first chance of the congress being brought into harmony. Hitherto the various conflicting interests have done nothing but antagonize each other. Unless the delegates are brought together, a triple split of the international organization is threatened into the "nationalists," led by He - Bebel, the German socialist leader; the opponents of war, under the French leader, M. Herve, and the trades union.

BANDIT HUNTING IN THE FAR WEST

There Will be a Reproduction of a Train Robbery in Buffalo Bill's Wild West.

Among the typical western scenes which are to be produced during the performance of Buffalo Bill's Wild West in this city the reproduction of a train hold-up will be interesting. In this scene a practical engine drawing a practical train of cars will be utilized and the attack and robbery will be executed in genuine western fashion. There will be shown in strict accord with correctness of detail the methods employed not only in stopping and taking possession of the engine and train but also in securing the valuables of the passengers and the plunder of the express car. Then will follow a scene which introduces the real bandit hunters of the Union Pacific, an organization which is maintained by the railroad company for the purpose of protecting its property and avenging attacks upon its trains.

These bandit hunters are provided with a special car, wherein are stabled the saddle horses used by the officials in chasing desperadoes across-country. The car also provides permanent quarters for the men, guns and ammunition, and is, in fact, a travelling arsenal, peopled with experienced bandit

GOOD DIGESTION

With Good Digestion a Man Can Overcome Every Obstacle, Conquer Every Difficulty.

MR. R. Y. LECKIE.

MR. R. Y. LECKIE, Keno, Miss., writes: "I write to tell you of the great benefits that Peruna has accomplished for me. It has cured me of catarrh and seemingly all the other ills that I was subject to."

"I can eat anything before me and digest anything I eat. Physically I am a new man."

With weak or deranged digestion, the source of strength and vitality is impaired, the nerves are weak, the blood circulates feebly.

No man is capable of thinking accurately or doing anything vigorously while suffering with indigestion.

To rid the stomach of catarrh will produce clean, healthy mucous membranes and thus correct the digestion.

Peruna has the reputation the world over for doing this very thing. A course of Peruna promptly and completely sets the digestive organs at their true function.

hunters who know every foot of the territory surrounding the line of the railroad. When a hold-up takes place they are rushed to the scene by special service and since their organization, have never failed to trace one or more and sometimes all of the law-breakers whom they sought.

The Great Train Hold-Up is just as typically a Western scene and one picture in the history of western development as are the other scenic features of the Wild West exhibition.

"The Battle of Summit Springs," a great reproduction of barbaric Indian warfare; "A Holiday at T-B Ranch" showing incidents of pioneer life, and "An Attack Upon an Emigrant Train," illustrating the dangers of early prairie navigation.

The treachery and brutality of marauding Indians will be depicted in both the attack upon the emigrant train and the Holiday scene at T-B Ranch, showing the savage instinct of stealth in the matter of attack and brutality in warfare and assault.

NEW YORK WOMAN HONORED BY POPE

Wife of Street Car Magnate is Named Countess in the Catholic Church.

New York, Aug. 24.—Mrs. Thomas F. Ryan, wife of a street car magnate, has been ex-countess of the Roman Catholic church since last December, but the fact did not become public until today. Mrs. Ryan has never assumed the title and the fact that it had been bestowed by Pope Pius X was known only to church dignitaries and a few of Mrs. Ryan's intimate friends. It has been rumored within the last few days that Ryan was made a noble of the church and the honor conferred on his wife became known. Mrs. Ryan is said to have $5,000,000 annually to the church while maintaining charities which cost her another $1,000,000.

SUPT. MOORE WAS INJURED BY GANG OF LOCAL TOUGHS

BOARDED CAR AT BLACK HAND AND ASSAULTED MR. MOORE VICIOUSLY.

Conductor Came to Assistance of His Superior and the Attack Was Repulsed.

A terrific fight occurred at Black Hand shortly after 4 o'clock Friday evening in which the participants were Superintendent F. J. Moore of the Columbus, Newark and Zanesville interurban railway company and Conductor Cary Stevenson on the one hand and a gang of Newark toughs on the other. Shortly before the 4:15 car left Black Hand for Newark a party of ten or twelve men boarded the car, three of whom insisted on standing on the bumpers of the car. Conductor Beaumont requested them to go into the car, when they refused to comply with his wishes, saying that they would do as they pleased. Superintendent F. J. Moore, who happened to be at Black Hand at the time then mixed in and he also asked the men to step into the car. They again refused to do as requested. Mr. Moore then caught hold of the ring-leader and threw him from the car, when four other men jumped to their comrade's assistance. For a moment or two the blows fell thick and fast on Mr. Moore, and it looked as if he would go under. He quickly recovered from the surprise of the attack, and laid two of the men out.

At this-point in the proceedings, Conductor Cary Stevenson ran into the car, and seizing a heavy hammer, jumped into the fray. The two men succeeded in holding the gang off for a few moments when the east bound car arrived, having on board a special police officer. At sight of the officer the toughs concluded that they had about enough and quickly disappeared.

Supt. Moore had his right hand badly bruised and the middle finger was thrown out of place, but other than this he escaped unhurt. Some of the men are known to the railway officials, and it is more than likely that some arrests will be made. According to a statement made to the Advocate the assailants of Supt. Moore were Pennsylvania railroad employes.

Spain Urged On By Newspaper. Madrid, Aug. 24.—The Imparcial continues its criticism of the hesitating policy of the Spanish government towards Morocco, declaring that it is folly under the present circumstances to make any effort to organize the international police, Casablanca, the paper says, will for some time to come require a large force to occupy it, for if the troops are withdrawn Mussulman fanaticism will break out with renewed fury there and at other ports, as the departure of the soldiers will excite the Moors and result in further disturbances.

A FAKE MAGAZINE SOLICITOR

The Crowell Publishing Co., Woman's Home Companion, Farm and Fireside.

Department of Agents
Springfield, O., Aug. 10, 1907.

Mr. A. L. Norton,
Newark, Ohio.

Dear Sir:—Your letter of August 3d sent to New York, has just come to my desk. One would think that people would have better judgment than to suppose that they can get a magazine like Woman's Home Companion for 25 cents a year. Wish we could get hold of this rascal, J. B. Smith, who is forging our signature. Yes, we will prosecute him if you can get hold of him. He ought to be behind the bars along with the rest of his kindred, some of whom are mentioned in the Periodical Publishers Bulletin enclosed.

Hoping you will succeed in capturing this fake, I remain,
Very truly yours,

THE CROWELL PUBLISHING CO.
Per J. I. Duncanson, Manager Department of Agents.

About 200 Newark people in the last few weeks have been swindled by an agent giving the name of J. B. Smith, purporting to be a representative of The Crowell Publishing Co., by his offer of a year's subscription to the Woman's Home Companion for 25c. This is only one Fake Agent out of hundreds that come to Newark every year, soliciting for magazines and we have never heard of one going away empty-handed. Why, (and we have asked ourselves many many times this question) do our Newark people insist on turning their money over to strangers when we have repeatedly advertised the fact that we at all times guarantee to furnish any and all magazines at the same or lower price than any quoted you by a responsible agent. Why not order your magazine from a responsible home store, and save money? All persons who were swindled by this J. B. Smith, will learn something to their advantage by calling at Norton's Book Store.

SOLDIER BADLY HURT IN AFFRAY AT PORT CLINTON

HAZING OF MILITIAMAN RESULTS SERIOUSLY AND VICTIM MAY DIE.

Two Soldiers Stabbed By Infurated Private, Who is Under Arrest.

Camp Perry, Ohio, Aug. 24.—A report given out today by the United States hospital authorities stated that Corporal Charles Bradley, who was last night stabbed below the heart while he slept, by Private N. Huggins, following a hazing affair, will probably recover. Private Fred Mullenberg, also of Bowling Green, who was stabbed in the arm and back is able to be out of the hospital today, but it unfit for duty.

Huggins, who lives at North Baltimore, joined the National Guard three weeks ago. Last night the members of Company H, to which he belonged, tossed the young man in a blanket. He seemed to take his hazing good naturedly, and nothing more was thought of the affair until Bradley came running from his tent with blood pouring from a wound in his stomach. Litter call was sounded and both wounded men were taken to the hospital.

Bradley was operated upon immediately by surgeons of the U. S. army and it is now believed he will recover. Huggins is under arrest at the guard room. If relatives of the injured man refuse to prosecute him he will be court-martialed and dismissed from the militia. Otherwise he will be turned over the civil authorities. He will be held until the result of his victims' wounds are fully determined.

Captain Hatfield of Company H is prosecuted by the stabbing affray, and has not been able to examine Huggins. Huggins remains sullen, and will not talk about the casting.

OPERATOR HIT BY FAST TRAIN

WRECK CHANGED RUNNING OF TRAINS AND WEEKLY WAS CONFUSED.

Engine Passed Over Man and He Was Removed From Under Tender. Died on Train.

Union Station, O., Aug. 21.—A frightful accident occurred here at 10 o'clock Friday night, which resulted in the death of Mr. W. H. Weekly, the well known and popular railroad operator at this point. The particulars of the sad affair as near as can be learned are as follows: There was a wreck at some point on the road which made it necessary for west bound trains to run into Union Station on the north track. When B. & O. passenger train, due at Union Station at 9:26, pulled into the station the operator failed to notice the fact that the train was on other than the regular track, and picking up the mail sack, stepped immediately in front of the swiftly approaching train. The engine struck Weekly with terrific force on the back of the head and on the hip and passed over him. The train was stopped and Weekly's body was picked up from under the tender and placed on the train, the intention being to take him to Columbus and place him in a hospital. The injured man, however, breathed his last as the train was pulling into Outville, where the body was turned over the Undertaker Wm. Larimore, who prepared it for interment.

Aside from the terrible cut behind the left ear and injury to the hip, the body had not been badly mangled. Undertaker Larimore had the body brought to the late home of the deceased here Saturday morning.

Mr. Weekly was aged about 37 years, and was a cripple, having lost his left foot some time ago. He is survived by his widow and ten children, who have the sympathy of all in their sad affliction.

It is not known when the funeral will take place, but the interment will be made in the cemetery at the Licking church.

Six weeks ago Weekly took the third degree in Odd Fellowship in Williams lodge of Hebron, and the funeral will probably be under the auspices of that lodge.

The deceased is also survived by his father, Mr. Nathaniel Weekly, and six brothers and two sisters. They are Scott, W. H. and Allen Thurman Weekly of Newark, Elias B. Weekly of Black Hand, Nathan Thomas Weekly, whose whereabouts are unknown, and George Alvy Weekly of Wheeling, W. Va. The sisters are Mrs. Perry E. Snelling of Newark, and Mrs. Alonzo Cotton, who lives six miles north of the city.

SWEDEN'S PRINCE STIRS UP TROUBLE IN SWELL NEWPORT

Newport, R. I., Aug. 21.—Prince Wilhelm of Sweden has stirred up more trouble in the millionaires summer colony than Newport has known in many seasons. Practically every plutocrat in the fashionable Rhode Island resort wanted to entertain the royal visitor. There was not enough of the prince, however, to go around, and to make matters worse, Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish, not satisfied with her prominent share, secured his acceptance to two social functions. Of the disappointed ones, the Goetts and Vanderbilts are said to be the angriest of mind. The names of neither Mrs. Ogden nor Mrs. Robert Goeler, nor of Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt appears in the list of guests at the dinner at Cross Ways, given in the prince's honor by Mrs. Fish Thursday night.

The prince is making a tour of the naval war college and naval training and torpedo stations at P. Adams.

SECRET SOCIETIES

Modern Woodmen.

Cedar Camp, No. 4727, Modern Woodmen of America, met in regular session on Monday night with a good turn out of members. Five applicants for beneficial membership were elected.

It was decided to commence doing the work again on the second meeting night in September and a class will be taken in on that night. After the work is over a committee will select the members. It is the desire of the officers of Cedar Camp to again put on the work every Monday night and every Neighbor is requested to bring in a new member. We are near the 1200 and by January 1, 1908, we want to number 1200 or more beneficial members in good standing. There are several camps in the state that are near our present membership and they are after the state banner, but if the Neighbors of Cedar Camp will put their shoulders to the wheel and hustle in the candidates we will hold the state banner for another year and have Cedar Camp's Forester Team go to the Head Camp at Peoria, Ill., as the banner camp of the state of Ohio. Cedar Camp has sent its team to two head camps in the state, and Neighbors we want to send them for the third time as the team from the banner camp in the state. We have held the state banner for five consecutive years, and if we get a hustle on ourselves we can hold it for another year. Don't forget neighbors, that on the second meeting night in September that the work will be put on in good form and that there will be several candidates to ride the goat on that night, and we want a big turn out. Tell the neighbors that we are going to commence the fall and winter work on that night and we want them to be at this meeting. When you come to the meeting on that night bring an application with you. Remember the 1200 mark is the watchword and get a hustle on yourself and bring in a candidate to ride the goat.

Odd Fellows.

Newark lodge No. 623, I. O. O. F., conferred the second degree on three candidates last Monday night. Next Monday night they will confer the third degree on a number of candidates. All Odd Fellows are made welcome.

The Knights are progressive and believe in having things up-to-date and when finished will have one of the most beautiful and attractive lodge rooms in the State. Several petitions have been received lately and when work begins this fall we shall expect to witness work every night all winter. Let the teams begin preparation.—Johnstown Independent.

K. O. T. M.

Returning, the boat will leave McConnelsville at 3:30 p. m., arriving at Zanesville at 7:30, at home again at 9 p. m.

Dancing on the boat going and coming will be free to all, and an orchestra will accompany the crowd to furnish the music.

All those desiring dinner on the boat should notify Bro. A. G. Smith at the postoffice, not later than Monday noon. Those desiring can take picnic lunches with them. Tickets can be had from Brothers A. G. Smith, Geo. Land or R. F. Williams, or from any member of the council, as well as at interurban station on day of outing.

Every member of Golden Rod Council should go on this fine outing and should induce their friends to go. Let us make this one of the most successful functions in the history of the council.

Remember, it is a 110 mile trip for the small cost of $1, and this in itself should draw a crowd.

ATTIRED AS MAN SHE WORKED IN MINE

Husband Forced His Wife to Labor By His Side—Is Sent to Jail.

Washington, Pa., Aug. 21.—Steve Povie, a miner, yesterday was sentenced to pay a fine of $10 and serve 30 days in jail for employing his wife as a helper in the Creedmore coal mine at Cecil.

Attired as a man the woman worked beside her husband, and her identity was not disclosed until she met with an accident, when her sex was revealed, and the miner admitted that she was his wife. He forced her to work in the mine, and was scored by the judge who imposed the severe punishment. The whole mining community was aroused by the man's act, and insisted that he be given the maximum penalty.

BUG IN WIND PIPE CAUSED A PANIC

Man in Church Yawned and Then Choked on the Bug.

Danville, Ky., Aug. 24.—Augustus Travers, while attending church near here, almost caused a panic among the large congregation. It was a late hour, and he yawned vigorously sucking into his windpipe a large bug with horny legs. The insect began to scratch and claw, and Travers emitted loud, gurgling sounds and strange guttural whoops.

Travers was so pained and excited that he could tell no one the cause of his mysterious actions, and members of the congregation became frightened, and began leaving the church.

Finally the bug was ejected from the air passage and while Travers is suffering considerably, it is believed that he will recover.

When the excitement occasioned by this incident had subsided, the minister drew a moral from the accident, by informing his congregation that the church was not the place to yawn.

SPOTTED FEVER AGAIN RAGING

Neighboring Village Now in Grasp of Terrible Scourge—One Loss So Far.

Sandusky, Aug. 24.—The spotted fever scourge which wreaked dreadful disaster in Castalia last winter, has broken out anew in Parkertown, a neighboring village.

Dr. Gorfuch, who treated many former victims, announced Friday that Maurice, the 8-months-old son of H. Bragg, has indisputable symptoms of the disease. The child has been ill several days and many have been exposed.

Dr. C. H. Metz of Sandusky, went with Dr. Gorfuch Friday afternoon to administer the special anti-toxin which saved some lives at Castalia. In the Castalia epidemic there were 13 deaths out of 19 cases of the disease.

FATHER KILLED INSTEAD OF DOGS

Son Started Out to Protect Flock of Sheep—Gun Was Discharged at Father.

Frankfort, Ky., Aug. 24.—Robert Anderson, aged 51 years, a prominent farmer, was instantly killed here yesterday morning with a shotgun in the hands of his thirteen-year-old son.

The father and the elder son had been guarding their sheep fold from dogs, which had greatly depleted the flock, and when retiring for the night had forgotten to eject the cartridges from the gun. Before the father awoke the young son picked up the gun and, calling to his baby sister, said he, too, would kill the dogs. As he went out the gun in some manner was discharged, both loads striking the father in the hips and penetrating through the length of his body, causing instant death.

CONFERENCE OF UNION LEADERS

TO BE HELD MONDAY IN NEW YORK WITH COMMISSIONER NEILL.

Unions Have Evidence That Telegraph Companies Send Messages By Mail.

New York, Aug. 24.—With the arrival of President Small of the International Commercial Telegraphers' Union, definite efforts, looking toward forcing the officials of the Postal and Western Union companies into some sort of arbitration conferences will be started.

Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, John Mitchell, president of the United Mine Workers of America, and Charles P. Neill, United States Labor Commissioner are expected to be here Monday, when a conference will be held and the suggestion, at least, will be made that President Roosevelt be asked to intervene.

In the face of constant reiterations from the officials of the two companies that there is nothing to arbitrate, the union leaders believe that diplomatic procedure will bring about a conference. Evidence of the use of the mails by the companies when they are unable to send messages by wire, are in the hands of the union. Two messages which were delivered by mail carriers, were on display at the headquarters of the union.

STRIKER ADJUDGED INSANE.

BRAKEMAN SCALDED

Engine Sidewiped and Steam Pipes Broken, and Anderson Was the Victim.

Charles Anderson, a brakeman on the B. and O., was badly scalded at Shelby last night, when his train ran into an open switch and sidwiped another car. Anderson was riding in the engine cab and received the full benefit of the accident, as the cab was crushed and the steam pipes broken.

The escaping steam badly scalded his lower limbs before he was released. He was brought to Newark, his home, and hurried in McGonagle's ambulance to the Newark sanitarium, where his injuries were dressed.

Fiat Two-Cent-a-Mile Fare.

Topeka, Kan., Aug. 24.—Frank Grat-tan, newly appointed attorney for the state board of railway commissioners, issued a statement favoring the calling of a special session of the legislature by Governor Hoch for the purpose of the passing of a flat two-cent-a-mile passenger fare in the state of Kansas.

ARTISTIC TOUCH TO POLICE COURT

When Wielder of the Brush Answered to the Mayor's Call for First Case.

"Call the first case," said Mayor McCleery in police court Saturday morning, and Miss Y. Carpenter, an artist and about 60 years old, faced his honor. She was arrested by Officer Brooke and was charged with being drunk. She was fined five and costs and committed to jail.

Frank Winkie, a Columbus product, came next. He was arrested by B. and O. Officer Foreman and was charged with being drunk. He paid the five and costs.

Walter McKinzie tanked up and had things pretty much his own way until Officer Carroll nabbed him. He drew the usual fine and for good measure the mayor sent him to the hard rock pile for a term.

Park Ferguson of Parkersburg, next came up on the same charge that caused the others to be there and got the same fine, with the stone pile thrown in, so McKinzie would not be lonesome.

Ray Penick, who was arrested for non-support of a minor child, was up for examination, but waiving his right, he was bound over to grand jury under $500 bond, which he furnished.

Greeley Ackerman has the bad habit of getting polluted frequently, and when he does, he abuses his father, a man 80 years of age. Getting tired of seeing it and being unable some of the time to prevent it, Greeley's brother James came before the mayor this morning and swore out a warrant against him, charging him with habitual drunkenness. An officer was detailed to get a line on Greeley and arrest him.

Snow White and Rose-Red—By Edith Wyatt

IN a dark jungle of prejudice there once lived a harsh, facetious young man, named Ralph Rankin.

In mind, he was not naturally dull or illiberal, but an association of thirty years with gentlemen who loved being cowed, had imposed upon him such a respect for the arbitrary and the crabbed, as one might, according to tradition, gain from residence among pirates.

In body he was tall, with a long face, pointed jaw, and some distinction of bearing.

In estate, he possessed a slight fortune, inherited from his father, and a stone-front house, in a rented row, on the north side.

His fortune he intended to increase by law practice, and for such a purpose he read books of jurisprudence all day in the office of an elder attorney. His house he inhabited. It was a place of harmonious rooms, in dark unvarnished woods, and excellent shades of Whatman, hung with a few well-selected pictures and bordered by low book-cases.

Ralph professed a passion for the modern, patronized realistic fiction and symbolic drama, and attended clubs and societies where radical ideas were voiced with freedom and good sense.

While outwardly he followed these pursuits, so enlightened, broadening, and humane, inwardly, he had developed a violent and gay temperament, large, it is true, but rough and overbearing.

By this he unconsciously kept in a state of tutelage unknown to the savage woman, his aunt and his young orphan sister, Ellen.

Ellen was a pretty and quiet, but meek-minded girl, who found an unhealthy comfort in being devoted though ill-treated. She encouraged grumbling about small domestic misfortunes like burnt biscuits by an air of meek guilt. However much she disagreed when Ralph said such things as that a man who would wear tan shoes in the evening would make good gun food, that after he heard a person spit his infinite he never spoke to him again, and that good Romanticists were dead Romanticists, she would only smile and shake her head fondly.

This was partly from her love of being oppressed, and partly because she derived that delight from hearing her brother damning right and left without regard to reason or the truth, that other mild natures derive from melodrama and the dime novel.

As to her own bearing, it was one of the utmost caution and tentativeness. To her the world was made up of people of superior sophistication going about seeking whom they might devour. She often sat silent for whole evenings from a general vague fear of committing some forgettable outrage before these persons. She spent almost all her time in thinking about such things as whether it would be better form to wear her small hat or to wear her large one to the Thomas concert.

This sensitiveness was not from any misfortune in the girl's personal appearance. She was a graceful little creature, beautifully made, with large, fawn-like eyes, pale-brown hair, a passionless expression, and a very clear white coloring.

The two orphans had a slight acquaintance with a girl named Regina Von Heller, in whose presence Ellen appeared as the snowdrop beside the cardinal flower.

Regina was a girl of impulsive, hasty manners, and Austrian parentage. She had a mobile face, a flashing color, and a curved, rather scornful mouth. She carried her head high above her beautiful shoulders and bust, and in her most sly and care-free moments, preserved a certain erectness.

Madame Von Heller, her mother, a thin little noblewoman with a water-fall, and a black silk apron, taught German, French, and penmanship in schools and in private classes attended by Ellen.

The poor lady had eloped in her sentimental middle-age from Vienna with her music teacher, a tall, pale, with dirty fingers, excited eyes, and a dyed purple mustache.

He supported her very ill by tuition at girl's schools on the continent, and in New York, where he died.

In these various academies and convents of her parent's classes, Regina had been somewhat scrupulously educated till her mother came to Chicago.

Here there had been offered to her the chance of a position where she taught the branches, lady-like manner, unimpaired by a ray of intelligence. She played accompaniments also, and gave a few lessons in the same harmless and dignified way.

By this means she managed to support herself and her daughter in rooms of their own, on a small, crooked German street, to send Regina to one of the best masters in the city for singing, and to keep her at the school, where she offered instruction.

On a cold few minutes at the Rankin's house to deliver an exercise to Ellen.

On this occasion Ralph came across her in the hall.

"Who is your friend, the grenadier?" he said to Ellen, afterwards. Regina had worn a small fur cap.

"Her mother teaches that French class Miss Vanderbank got up," said Ellen.

"Heavens, heavens," said Ralph. "A girl who will wear a sealskin cap is worse than invisible."

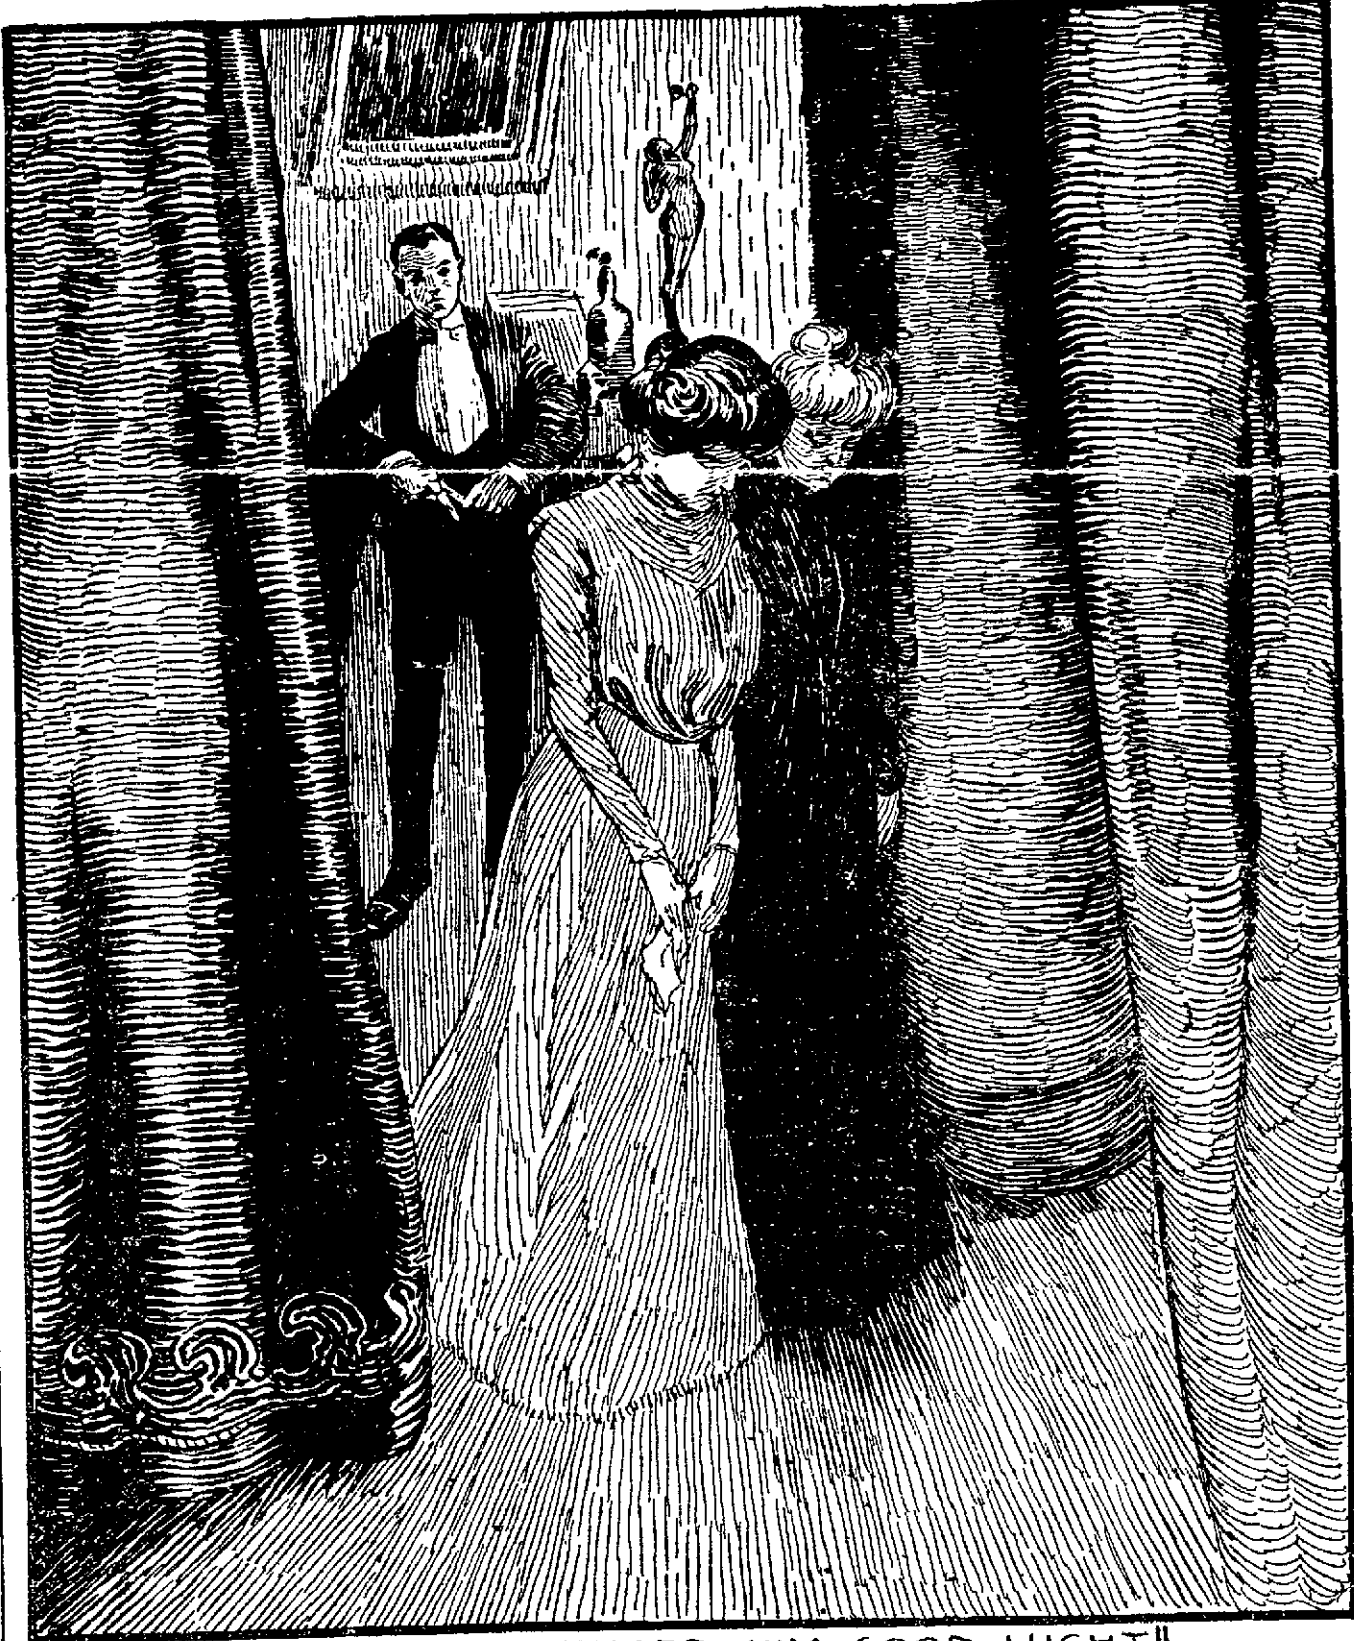

Ellie could not help knowing there was more to Regina than the fact of her wearing a sealskin cap. But she would not have dreamed of uttering a word in opposition.

In this manner Ralph roamed deeper and deeper into the jungle and mist, perhaps, have been there forever lost if he had not been started from the thicket by an uncommon incident.

On a rainy spring evening Regina Von Heller was sitting by an open window on the second story, close over the street, looking out at the darkness by the blowing light of a gas-lamp.

The water splashed heavily, darkening the wooden sidewalks, striking the shadowy red-brick and brown frame fronts, and the lapped silence of the enclosed place.

After a close day the rain dropped

"THEY SIMPLY KISSED HIM GOOD NIGHT"

through the air a fine chill the girl waited long to enjoy.

While she was sitting half asleep, with the fresh wind blowing in her face, a voice shouted, "Help! Help!"

There was a sound of something clattering and falling. Shots cracked, and a man with his hat cocked over his eyes ran past down the street, while a neighbor, a Mr. Ostermann, dressed in trousers and a night-shirt open at the throat, rushed ponderously out of his house, and stood shouting, "Robbers! Murder! Police!" in almost sobbing tones.

Regina threw a little old Roman striped shawl over her shoulders, slipped down stairs without waking Madame Von Heller, and ran out into the rain.

At the same moment two men came plunging down the street, a young reporter and Ralph Rankin.

They were returning late from the theatre. The Clark Street line was blocked, and from the platform of a Wells Street car they had heard the shots and Mr. Ostermann's cries. The reporter always dashed to any scene of excitement, and Ralph could hardly do less than accompany him.

"Where did they go? Which way? Are you hurt?" they exclaimed to Mr. Ostermann, still moaning loudly. "Help! Help!" and apparently unable to make any intelligible or coherent reply.

"There, that way down," Regina called, pointing the unknown rescuers dramatically towards the end of the street.

Realizing the hopelessness of intercourse with Mr. Ostermann, they had crossed to her.

"Is anyone shot? Was anyone really hurt?" asked the reporter, as Ralph and Regina hastily recognized one another.

"Oh, no. Go at once," said Regina. She had no knowledge at all, only what she was saying about the man with his hat knocked over his eyes expected to be chased. She pointed again towards the blur of rain at the end of the street, and the young men started fleetly off over the echoing pavement.

At Mr. Ostermann's steps some neighbors with umbrellas and shawls had now gathered. Mrs. Ostermann, at her open door, with her children about her, was giving all possible aid to the neighbors, while her husband, his throat bared to wind and rain, ran through his bushy rumples his fingers crossed at the crowd, and occasionally exploded with, "Himmel! Se-andere! ones!"

The Ostermanns were jewellers. On that night Mr. Ostermann had brought some repairing work home. Of this it was supposed the thieves had known. However that might be, both the Ostermanns had been awakened by a noise on a lower floor.

Mr. Ostermann had put on his trousers and entered the parlor door just as a man jumped in at the parlor window.

"You ran shot twice, and then as Mr. Ostermann began to scream, jumped down from the window again."

He was gone when the householder reached the street. Nothing, it appeared, had been taken.

The neighbors began to say that Mr. Ostermann knew it. But what could she do? No one could do anything with him when he was like that. She added in a "one of pride."

There were interested murmurs that he was a very violent, excitable man. His friends brought him to go in, went up to him, but their hands southing on his arms and endeavoring to calm him, but his nature was too grand for that.

He flung them off, opening his eyes widely at them, and growling fiercely enough.

"To the young men, as they came back dripping with the policemen, he exclaimed, haughtily, 'Vneil, where is he? Did you get him? I guess not, No.'"

The brave young men and officers went breathlessly up the steps, offering a stage for the recital of their chase. The neighbors crowded around below.

During the account of his rescuers Mr. Ostermann's mood changed. He was now pleased and patronizing with them, as good-hearted fellows who had after all done what they could, and putting their shoulders he said graciously, "Thank you, my friends, thanks to all. Come in, come in and have a good rest out of the rain, and a glass of beer to talk it over."

He extended his invitation to all about, and to Mrs. Ostermann's proud consternation it met with universal acceptance. All came trooping in out of the gale, the neighbors, the policemen, the young men, and Regina, in her Roman striped shawl.

Beer was brought. All was thoroughly talked over. Mr. Ostermann, in his night shirt, now radiant and heroic.

"After all," he said, "it was hardly so much the loss of the jewels that enraged me as the disturbance of peace."

Everyone was uncommonly pleased and expansive. The neighbors became congratulatory, the police complacent, Mr. Ostermann full of civic sentiments and hospitality, his children tumbling on the floor in their night clothes, uproarious, and the young men delighted to rest and refresh themselves after their noble efforts.

The rain slackened. It was plainly time to go. Mr. Ostermann shook hands with his guests as he passed them, observing when he came to the young men and the policemen, "As for you, my friends, should you ever want for anything, come by me."

On the next morning when Madame Von Heller and Regina were taking their chocolate, the girl spoke of the excitement of the night before.

"Was it eleven o'clock, did you hear you say," asked Madame Von Heller, in melancholy tones.

"Yes."

"And why were you up at that so late hour, my daughter?"

"The rain was cool. I was putting my head out in it."

"And was not that disagreeable?"

"No," said Regina. "It was wonderful outdoors. I had been reading 'Vor Sonnenanfang' gang. I was excited, and the air tranquilized me. I braked my hair down and put on my nice gray sack and leered out in the rain. All was beautiful. All was black and still just like 'Ueber allen Gipfeln ist Ruh'. Then suddenly I heard the pistol shots and ran out."

"But first putting up your hair?" said Madame Von Heller, anxiously.

"No," said Regina. "I could not wait."

"But not in your old gray sack, I trust?"

"Yes," said Regina, rising and placing her chocolate cup on the table.

Madame Von Heller shook her head. Though she had eloped and had spent much of her time during her husband's life with revolutionary and carelessly dressed figures, she had always appeared neatly costumed in a high collar and one of her jewel sets, with the brooch matching the cuff buttons.

"I have never liked such things," she said gravely. "And were unknown men there also?"

"Yes. Two tall, fine young men came dashing down the street. Though unarmed they pursued the robbers. They were brave as lions. One proved to be the brother of that Miss Rankin. Mr. Ostermann could not thank them enough."

"They must have been much surprised to see a young lady with hair down running through the streets without chaperon or escort," said Madame Von Heller, mournfully.

Suddenly she began to cry.

Regina rushed up to her, seized her warmly in her arms, and snatching her hands, kissed first one and then the other in distress.

"Heavens knows you are all I have in the world," said Madame Von Heller. "When you turn on me where shall I go? Reckless as you are, you will bring misfortune by such ways."

The tears streamed down her face.

Regina, instantly worked upon by any neighboring emotion, began to weep, too.

"What would the private pupils and the ladies teaching at Miss Tyson's say, could they know that in the midst of the night my daughter rushes madly about with streaming hair, chattering to unknowns in the muddy streets?" Madame Von Heller's chin quivered. "But all this has come because we are poor and alone. Were I wealthy and powerful you would do nothing but with respect to me. And Miss Rankin, what must she think, refined one that she is, a true lady, when her brother speaks of all. To her we must seem the most miserable outcasts of the earth. In squalid dressing gowns, thrusting our heads out to be beat on by the storm—"

"Oh, no. Mother, mother," said Regina.

Her whole body was shaken by sobs. Even her feet under the table, very small and pretty, with high arches, but in flapping pink slippers, shook with her emotion.

"Look at me, my daughter," said Madame Von Heller. "I have grieved you, and anything is better than this—that we tear and bite each other. Speak no more of the horrors of the past night. All is over and must be borne. Should you see Mr. Rankin we will ignore him to reveal nothing. You say he has a noble heart." She embraced Regina.

Within a few minutes she was sitting quietly at the table, correcting German lessons in perfect calm, with a small gold pen presented by a pupil.

She was entirely appeased, when on the following day Ralph, meeting her as she dispersed her French class, his parlor seemed to address her with his respect, and to show no disposition to refer to the low episode of the Ostermanns and their thieves.

The truth is that having once dashed from the wilderness at this outer cry, Ralph was refreshed by his adventure.

He had been charmed with the street, charmed with the rainy spring evening, he liked to have the neighbors and the policemen trooping about as though they were in a comic opera, and Regina sitting talking beside him, her hair sparkling with the rain and her face eager and excited.

When he saw her again, in her sealskin cap and fur-lined circular, at a musicale in the rooms of her master, an excellent artist, her appearance seemed to him one of high romantic distinction.

It is a great pleasure to be able to see an excellent artist, was a good friend of Ralph's, and after this the young man sometimes visited him when Miss Von Heller took her lesson.

He mentioned this casually to his aunt and Ellie, saying, "I saw your friend, Miss Von Heller, to-day." But to impart that he found a keen interest in a person capable of creating from a window to see a neighborhood scrambling would so have shaken the foundation of these ladies' understanding of him that he could hardly attempt it.

He sometimes put Regina on the car, once carried her a piece of music left behind, and by degrees fell into the habit of visiting her often on Wofram street.

Here she talked eagerly to him of her many idols, De Reszke, Garibaldi, Perovskaya, Hauptmann, and a hundred others.

"Well," said Ralph, "that 'Versunkene Glocke,' where the bell keeps ringing, is too much for me. I can't hear what's going on. It's the same way with that other play, 'The Bells,' where the Jew is murdered. Anything that has a bell in it I can't down. 'Hear the loud alarum bells, brazen bell, and all.'"

Regina was not gifted with a sense of humor, and she now regarded him with blazing eyes. "And can all that so beautiful and Titan dream be nothing to you for such a small queer reason as that?" she remarked coldly. "To me these bells are vast echoing tones of memory and tradition tolling through the soul of a struggling one. But you, rather than trying to know a great work of art, prefer to seem a little funny, and like a course jesting column of some conservative press."

Ralph could hardly refrain from laughing at this fierceness, but he said meekly and hastily, "Oh, yes, I know the play's a splendid thing. I must read it again."

Ellie and the aunt would never have recognized him, either in the fairness of his tone, or in the calm content of his manner, as he sat in a room filled with such objects as he had always considered particularly incriminating.

A coarse paper, brilliantly flowered, hung the irregular walls. Photographs were everywhere, of actors, actresses, professional people in theatre postures, armor, togas, and fur overcoats. Coarse starched white lace curtains broke the yellow light of the afternoon, that gleamed in the reflecting surfaces of the ugly ornamental furniture. A Steinway Grand, Herr Von Heller once, glittered in the middle of the floor with polished woods, quivering strings, and mellow sounding-board. It was open, as Ralph always said, to give the fullest sound. Scattered over the music-rack were Pauer's "Tourbillon," "The Night Has a Thousand Eyes," and "Wenn ich in deinen Augen seh."

In this incorrect apartment Ralph would sit for hours, tranquil, amused, and admiring, eating ginger cookies and cottage cheese, and drinking tea, strong and badly prepared by Madame Von Heller in the intervals of giving lessons, and served in iron-stone china cups without handles, very hot and hard to hold.

He sometimes told Regina about a hundred insignificant things, so remote from her experience as to seem wonderful to her. Sometimes he read her poetry she considered beautiful, beyond the dreams-of-angels, and sometimes teased her by making such remarks as "that there were nothing but dagoes in 'Paola and Francesca,' and he had always supposed 'The Intruder' was a bill-collector. But more often he appeared in the character she instinctively accredited him with, that of a man fearless of marauders and public opinion alike, and extremely open-minded. Such a man he really was in her presence."

It has been said that Mr. Rankin, if harsh and heady, was large; and his size may perhaps be best indicated by his appreciation of Regina. This, at first the sheest caprice and exception of his fancy, came, after a winter in the presence of her enthusiasm, pride, and beauty, to be one of the most profound impressions of his nature, a passion and a conviction.

The very unworldliness that once had seemed to him a mere ludicrous blight, now appeared endearing, a diversion, and sometimes touching beyond expression.

There was something disinterested, unconscious, and noble in the girl—her bearing, her sympathies, her ideas—that swept him like a cool wind.

More and more this came to be the very necessary breath of life to him.

His betrothal to Regina, none the less, aroused general contempt and indignation.

Madame Von Heller wept and shook her head for hours over the serious turn the affair had taken. She was especially depressed after she learned that Ralph's father had made his fortune in the flour business. She repeated again and again that it was because they were poor and alone in the world that Regina accepted the hand of a tradesman. Moreover, she soon came around. In fact, she was not a little consoled by the prospect of leading a single life. She had been always, by nature, if not by condition, a spinster; and she now eagerly refused Ralph's eager entreaties that she remain with her daughter.

The thought of having a small room and parlor of her own alone with her black silk apron and gold pen, at Miss Tyson's, without the perturbing presence of Regina, had high attractions for her.

The aunt and Ellie made far more terrible scenes than Madame Von Heller. They said nothing at all. Nor did they shed a tear in Ralph's presence. They merely looked at each other, as though he had blasted their dearest hopes; and, when they visited Regina, addressed her in a tone of quiet endurance more pinching to Ralph than curses.

The poor fellow himself behaved in the most generous and unresentful manner among the trials to which all these ladies subjected him, and endured with humorous equanimity both Madame Von Heller's scorn of his low business and the sweet, silent tolerance at home.

It is a great pleasure to be able to see that he was amply rewarded by the exalted tenderness of his Regina.

So that not only in the land of fairy tale, but also that of natural history, a radical transformation brought a delightful revolution of fortune to all about.

The aunt and Ellie, it is true, were for a short time in low spirits, doing exactly as they pleased, and with no one by to direct them or to impose upon them.

But within a year Ellie married a conservative young college professor, who gave her and the aunt all their opinions, sukked if the beef were underdone, and bullied them to their heart's content.

GOOD HEALTH.

A Few Simple Hints on a Simple Way to Remain Well.

By Cousin John.

No. VIII.

In practically every household, particularly where there are children, it is found advisable to keep constantly on hand some simple remedies to relieve the occasional distressing though not dangerous ailments that break out suddenly when it is either impossible or inconvenient to reach physician or druggist.

It is not always an easy matter to decide in advance just what remedies to select or just what complaints to forestall. To have a great diversity of medicines is not well, because then, when the emergency arises, one is often bewildered as to the best choice.

The family medicine chest should contain remedies of which each is a specific for certain common ailments. The ailments that are practically certain to appear now and then in every family are as follows: I, lumbago, sore joints, rheumatic pains, etc., due to colds. II, cough, bronchitis, laryngitis, cold in the chest, etc. III, dyspepsia, sour stomach, etc. IV, boils, pimples, hives, etc. V, headache, neuralgia and face-ache. VI, sore throat, whooping cough, and hoarseness. VII, cold in the head, influenza, catarrh, sneezing, etc. VIII, diarrhoea, dysentery, cholera infantum, and summer complaint. IX, teething pains in infants, cramps, colic, etc. X, constipation, biliousness, sick-headache, torpid liver, etc.

In this list, the complaints that are grouped together are allied and can usually be alleviated by the same specific.

The point to be sure of in selecting the specifics is to select those that are non-dangerous. The simple, old-fashioned remedies are usually the safe ones.

They must have three qualities which are equally important: The drugs used in them must be absolutely pure; the formula under which they are compounded must be perfect; and the measuring and weighing of each drug must be as accurate as science can make it.

After these three vital matters have been ascertained, the next thing to look after is to select such remedies as will be sure to retain their virtue till they are needed. As a rule, remedies in dry form are the most satisfactory, because there is no loss from evaporation or leakage. It is necessary, however, to see that they are so put up that they will withstand hot weather as well as cold.

Tablets also have the advantage of usually being easy to take. In addition to this, they make an accurate dose, if manufactured right. It is extremely difficult to measure remedies accurately by drops or teaspoonfuls, and this difficulty becomes a serious one when there is a sudden emergency in the middle of the night.

To ensure both that the remedies are kept in good condition and that the right one shall be used when needed, they should be kept in good, transparent bottles, carefully labeled with full directions printed very legibly.

WHY BABY CRIED.

Prince Haseba of Japan, in an interview in Spokane, said recently:

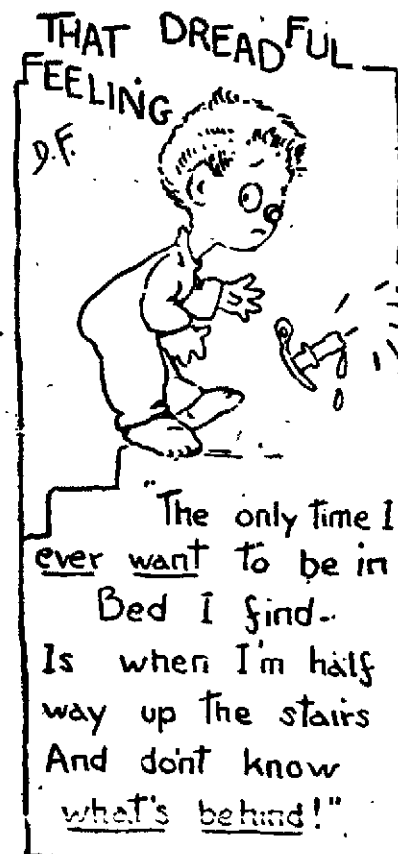

"Japan's danger now lies in her prosperity. She is in danger of making money her god. To make money one's god is a bad thing. It is a passion like the maternal instinct, like the mother's love for her young, which causes the mother to be inconsiderate and cruel to husband, servants—all the world save her little child."

"There is a young mother here in Spokane at whom I laughed the other day."

"She had engaged a new nurse for her baby. The nurse came to her and said: 'I don't know what's the matter, madam, but the little one cries and cries. I can do nothing to quiet it.'"

"The mother thought a moment then, brightening up, she said: 'I remember now. Baby's last nurse was a southern mammy. You will find the stove polish on the third shelf of the kitchen closet.'"

A Jailor's Daughter

A New Way to Reform Criminals.
The daughter of a jailor in Brussels seems to have carried matters rather far in her endeavor to reform criminals who, by necessity, were her neighbors. It is feared that the other prisoners will claim that partially has been shown for until Belgium has improved on the Utah plan it will not be considered good form, at least, for a woman to have more than one husband at a time. It undoubtedly is a good thing for the husband whom she has, for the wedding bells had not died away into silence until the friends of the bride were striving their utmost to secure the release of her husband. As the man is serving a life sentence, there seems to be some doubt as to whether he will be released. And thus do we learn, day by day, the truth of the cynical belief that sentiment plays a small part in modern life.

For Acid Poisoning

For any of the acid poisons, as carbolic, nitric, sulphuric, oxalic, give raw eggs—at least three or four—sweet milk, melted lard, or flour and water mixed as thick as cream. Follow with calomel mixed with tepid water. Emetics are inadvisable; they rouse the stomach to too violent action. For narcotic poisons, as laudanum, opium, morphine, give first an emetic—mustard stirred thick in tepid water—and follow it with very strong coffee, a half-cupful every ten minutes. Keep the patient moving. Dash cold water over him, put ice to the back of his neck, and make him smell aromatic ammonia. For chloroform stupor, give aromatic spirits of ammonia well diluted, make the patient sniff it continually, keep him moving in the open air, and, if possible, apply a galvanic current to the back of the neck.

For Cuts or Wounds

Where blood comes in jets from even a small wound, there is no time to lose. The jetting is from a severed artery. Tie two handkerchiefs together, drawing the knots very hard. Slip them about the wounded part between the wound and the trunk. Look for the course of the artery; set a knot well over it, thrust in a short stick, and twist it round and round until the knot indents itself deeply in the flesh. Keep the knot there until the surgeon comes. Five minutes in such a case may mean life or death. Cut veins, though not so dangerous as severed arteries, are sufficiently so to need almost equally prompt treatment. Where blood flows in steady streams of dark crimson, put the knot below the wound, and twist it as before directed. Veins gather up blood from the extremities. Arteries take their supply straight from the heart.

Candles in Fashion

More and more fastidious homemakers are coming back to candle light. No other light compares with it for delicious softness or artistic effect in country houses particularly. No other light is so desirable, nor so easily managed. Candles of good sorts are cheap, and likely to be cheaper. The same is true of candlesticks, but none of the thousand new sticks are to be named beside the tall old brass and silver ones too often stowed away in garrets or kicking about cellars. Happy the house mistress who can lay her hands upon even a pair of them. If by any chance she has a dozen, then is she blessed indeed.

It is an insult to womanly intelligence to do more than name candle shades. The woman who does not love them, and delight in designing and contriving them to suit her separate household occasions, is indeed fit for treasuries, stratagems, and spoils.

Remedying Scratches

A scratch that goes no deeper than the varnish may be helped always, and healed sometimes by holding a red-hot poker an inch above it for the space of half a minute, and rubbing well, as soon as it cools, with a mixture of alcohol, olive-oil, and pure elder-vinegar in equal quantities. This makes a cheap and most excellent furniture polish. It may be shaken well before using, rubbed in with a woollen cloth, and polished with another. Persistent rubbing with it will offset the white marks left by hot things or wet things upon varnished wood. Where the mixture is used as a polish pure and simple, the thing to be polished should first be well cleaned either with turpentine, naphtha, or warm soap suds. Wood scratched deeper than the varnish should not be washed with the suds, as the water soaks into the scratches and makes an ugly permanent stain.

THE LINEN-CLOSET

A Model Linen Closet

A WORD in the beginning. Linen ought to be for use, not for show. Better the simplest clothes fresh from the laundry, even if something frayed, than the richest damask yellow with long lying. Indeed, it ought to be a cardinal rule in every home that the silver, linen, and fine manners are to be used every day. Use brightens and whitens all three, and does not wear them anything like so much as lying in wait for company.

Use, which is thus essential, should be also equal. To insure that, have a drawer apart from the main linen-closet. In it store a two-weeks' supply of every linen requisite. When all its contents have had their turn, take them back to the main closet and bring others in their stead.

Since a linen-closet may be nothing more than a caddy, or a stately apartment all over shelves and tables, it is worse than idle to dogmatize regarding its arrangement. But in a general way one principle runs through great and small. It is orderly and systematic placing. In the linen-room of the world's finest hotel there is a specially marked shelf space for the linen belonging to each of the seven hundred room there. Sheets, pillow cases, cushion slips, are of real linen, Irish or German, grass bleached, hand sewed, and embroidered with the hotel initial within a wreath of oak leaves. Further, in the table linen section each day of the week has a shelf. Monday's cloths and napkins go out only upon Mondays. Tuesdays it is the same. Even in times of great stress the rule keeps intact. The proprietor had rather buy extra things than to set the system of giving out and checking the main supply away.

This linen room keeps books with it. Every room is charged with the things issued to it. The chambermaids and laundrymen are responsible for its safe return. The laundry, which is up in the airy tip-top, beautifully lighted and ventilated, can wash, iron, and return five thousand odd pieces within an hour, and that without strain. Steam, steel, and electricity do the work, plentifully supplemented by human skill and muscle. The big steam mangle rollers are ten feet long and four feet across. Six girls stand either side of them, to spread the damp linen in place and take it off as it comes up smooth, dry, and shining. No housewife, even the richest, can command all that. It has been mentioned merely by way of exemplifying the value of system. What the hotel does in large the housemother may do.

Hints on Care of the Teeth

Much harm is done by the careless use of highly scented and injurious tooth washes and powders. There are many proprietary articles that are excellent, but there are just as many that contain acids and gritty substances that are ruinous to the enamel of the teeth. The teeth can be kept perfectly clean by the use of a little precipitated chalk once a day, and warm lime-water at night. Listerine and myrrin are harmless and very effective lotions for the teeth, and can be used in place of proprietary articles whose ingredients are a mystery.

If your teeth are set rather far apart, thus allowing particles of food to lodge between them, then use a quill tooth pick or dental floss. Needless to say, this must be done in the privacy of your room and not at the table. If tartar is inclined to form at the root of your teeth, you should eat lemons and acid fruits, and occasionally use magenta. Rinsing the mouth out with a solution of camphor is also beneficial.

A great many foreigners find in the working class of to-day have exceedingly white teeth, well preserved, and physicians say this is caused by the almost universal use of salt for cleaning their teeth. This is not recommended for a twice-a-day method, but by using it two or three times a week, great benefit will result. It destroys many deposits that are injurious to the teeth, and gives firmness to the gums.

Let me impress upon you the great necessity of visiting a dentist once every year. If your teeth are apt to decay then go twice a year. The majority of women wait until they have a toothache, then rush to the dentist for help. Many of these trips could be avoided, and large bills kept down to a minimum by these semi-annual visits. The dentist sees at once some little decay that is just starting, and which, if not treated, would mean the entire loss of the tooth. Once your teeth begin to

MARJORIE DANE'S LATEST PATTERNS

GIRLS' TUCKED AND PLAIN GULMPES.

Gulmpes make one of the most essential garments of the little girl's wardrobe and are always in demand, inasmuch as being constantly worn they constantly need replenishing. Here are two very charming and attractive little models that are absolutely simple at the same time that they are dainty in the extreme. The one is made with tucks that give a yoke effect, the plain space between the groups being embroidered by hand, while the other is quite plain and can be faced with yoking material on either square or round outline. Either gulmpes can be made with long or elbow sleeves as liked, so that every possible variation is provided for. In this case, Persian lawn is the material chosen, but there are various other lawns and batistes as well as some pretty embroidered all-over materials that are equally correct.

Each blouse is made with front and back and is drawn up at the waist line by means of tape inserted in the casing. There is a little standing collar at the neck, and whether the sleeves are in full or elbow length, they are gathered and finished with bands.

The pattern 5545, is cut in sizes for girls of 4, 6, 8, 10 and 12 years of age.

CHILD'S UNDER WAIST AND DRAWERS

No under garment yet devised suits the needs of the little folk so well as this waist, to which the drawers and petticoats can be attached. It is rendered strong and durable by V-shaped under-facings at the under-arms, and can be made of sturdy drilling or muslin, while the drawers are rendered dainty by the use of cambric or nainsook.

The waist is closed at the back by means of buttons and button-holes, and can be made with either round or square neck, while the drawers are so shaped as to mean freedom and comfort and are closed at the sides.

The quantity of material required for a child of six years of age is for under waist, 3/4 yards 27 inches wide, for drawers 1 1/2 yards 36 inches wide, with 3/4 yards of edging for trills.

The remedy of all remedies is, of course, cleanliness, and night and morning should see you with teeth well brushed and mouth well rinsed with some harmless lotion.

Indian Beauties

WITH no desire to detract one iota from the pulchritude of those maidens who are habitually photographed in the professional beauty contexts of the East, we would call attention to the fact that a recent exhibition of maidenly loveliness held in Collinsville, I. T., disclosed many matchless types that would unseat the reason of the average Eastern man if he is at all susceptible to this sort of hypnotism, says a recent issue of the Kansas Journal. In that contest 100 Indian girls belonging to the Cherokee, Creek, Comanche and Osage tribes were entered as exhibits, and those who have survived this remarkable symposium of beauty say that no such scene was ever witnessed before by mortal man.

The Indian type of beauty is ideal and incomparable, being of a kind that needs no artificial embellishment for art can never improve upon the superb coloring painted by generous nature through successive generations of those who live the wholesome life of the prairie and woods. Delicate beyond all imitation is the tint upon the dark cheek of the child of the red man, and in form and feature these Indian girls are in a class by themselves.

For the benefit of those Easterners who have formed a mind picture of girls in blankets and moccasins with barbaric ornaments in their raven hair, we will observe that the contestants in this Indian Territory beauty show represented more wealth than could be gathered together in the same number of participants anywhere in this country. Not only this, but they are rich in their own right. Miss Juanita Tokatomb, the first prize winner having $100,000 subject to her check, with oil wells galore. Miss Laura Brown, who took second prize, has an income of $500 a month, and so on down the list. Most of these girls were educated in the East or in Europe, and they wear gowns bought in Paris and have the average American girl "turned down" when it comes to breeding and accomplishments. Verily, there are beauty shows and beauty shows.

Keeping Eggs

ON the surface, egg-keeping should be easy. It is, in fact, among the problems of preservation. Shells, to the contrary notwithstanding, eggs take to themselves all sorts of taints. Nobody can dispute that who has wrestled with the athletic flavors of a limed egg, yet limed eggs are mild and mannerly beside some other sorts of eggs.

Egg shells are porous; indeed, they have several inches of pores to each single shell. Otherwise, they could not hatch; the forming chick must have air as soon as it has life. Where air can go in, other things can also go. Water or its equivalent, moisture, can likewise come out. Thus, to be kept well, an egg must be saved from evaporation.

The best way to keep a superabundant egg supply on to the times of scarcity is to either grease fresh eggs or varnish them lightly with water-glass—silicate of soda—then pack them down in cotton in shallow paper boxes, only two layers in a box, and pile the boxes in a dry, airy, cool place. Turn them over every three days, to prevent settling. The cotton must be clean, and can be used over and over as long as it is kept so. If an egg spoils, and explodes, take out the whole boxful at once. Neither greasy nor varnished eggs will hatch unless the grease or varnish is thoroughly washed off.

To Clean Papered Walls

A mop of cheese-cloth strips, an inch and a half wide and eight inches long, made fast to a light handle is the best thing for keeping a papered wall clean. Brush the paper well with it twice a month. Every spring and fall mix cornstarch, whiting and powdered Fuller's earth in equal parts, dip the mop into the powder and rub walls and ceiling well with it. Then shake all powder from the mop, cover it with a damp flannel, and go all over the wall again, wiping in long straight strokes. The flannel must be only damp. Wet, it is apt to leave marks. As soon as it is dirty change it for a fresh one.

Thick crust slices from a very stale loaf will also clean wall paper. Begin at the top and rub downward with long, steady strokes. It is a good way to cut a square loaf in two, lengthwise, rub with it till the cut surface is soiled, then slice the dirt off. Fuller's earth mixed to a thin paste with ammonia, and let dry over grease spots, will usually remove them. Brush off the dry paste with a clean stiff brush. For very delicate paper, fold powdered French chalk flat inside a thickness of gauze, lay the chalk-pad against the grease spot, and press well with a blazing hot iron. Properly managed, there will be no mark left. But where there is a big spot, the best way is to rub the paper square around it, wet, and scrape off; then put on a new piece, matching the wall pattern accurately. There should be an extra roll saved over from every room for just such work.

FRENCH CAKES

Lorraine Cakes.

TAKE one quart of flour, a half pound of butter, a small teaspoonful of salt, and two eggs. Mix and knead these well together. Flatten on the board to the thickness of two silver dollars. Butter a pie dish and line it with the paste, making a rounded edge at the top. Put it in the oven for fifteen minutes, and take it out. Beat two eggs together, with a pinch of salt and a half pint of cream. Pour into the paste. Scatter over a few small pieces of butter and put it again in the oven for another fifteen minutes. Serve warm or cold.

Biscuit de Savoie.

Take four yolks of eggs and mix them with three tablespoonfuls of powdered sugar. Add and mix two ounces of rice flour, a teaspoonful of vanilla, and the whites of the four eggs beaten to a froth. Butter a mold, put in the mixture, and cook it in the oven for about twenty minutes.

Quarter-Quartz Cake.

Weigh four eggs and mix with their equal weight of sugar, the same weight of flour, as much of butter, and a teaspoonful of vanilla. Butter a mold, put the mixture in, and bake it in the oven for twenty minutes.

How to Caramelize a Mold.

Put in a mold six tablespoonfuls of granulated sugar with enough water to moisten it. Set the mold on the stove; the sugar will melt and brown. Meanwhile, with a fork or a spoon, keep constantly stirring. When it becomes a golden brown, keep on the fire and turn the mold over on all its sides, allowing the sugar to spread and even helping it with the fork or spoon. When the mold is well covered with the caramel, then pour in the mixture.

Vanilla Sauce.

Take one pint and a half of milk, stir in three beaten eggs, and pass through a strainer in a double boiler. Add three tablespoonfuls of sugar. Put on the fire and when the water in the lower pan begins to boil, stir and keep stirring until the mixture has reached the consistency of a thick cream. Remove from the fire, add a tablespoonful of vanilla, and serve warm or cold.

Eggs With Macaroons.

Take the yolks of six eggs and the whites of three. Crush two macaroons very fine, and mix them with the eggs. Add one tablespoonful of orange flower water, two tablespoonfuls of sugar, and one ounce of melted butter. Beat as for an omelet. Butter a dish and pour the mixture in. Put it in a pot of boiling water and let it cook until it thickens. When done, sprinkle with powdered sugar, pass over it the salamander, and serve.

Gateau de Riz (Rice Cake).

Take five tablespoonfuls of rice and cook it in five tumblers of milk with five teaspoonfuls of granulated sugar. It needs to boil about fifty or sixty minutes. Remove from the fire and let it cool for a few moments. Then, while still warm, mix in the beaten yolks of five eggs and the five whites beaten to a froth. Pour the mixture into a caramelized mold. Set the mold in a pot of boiling water and let it cook slowly for forty minutes. When cold, turn out in a dish and serve with a vanilla sauce.

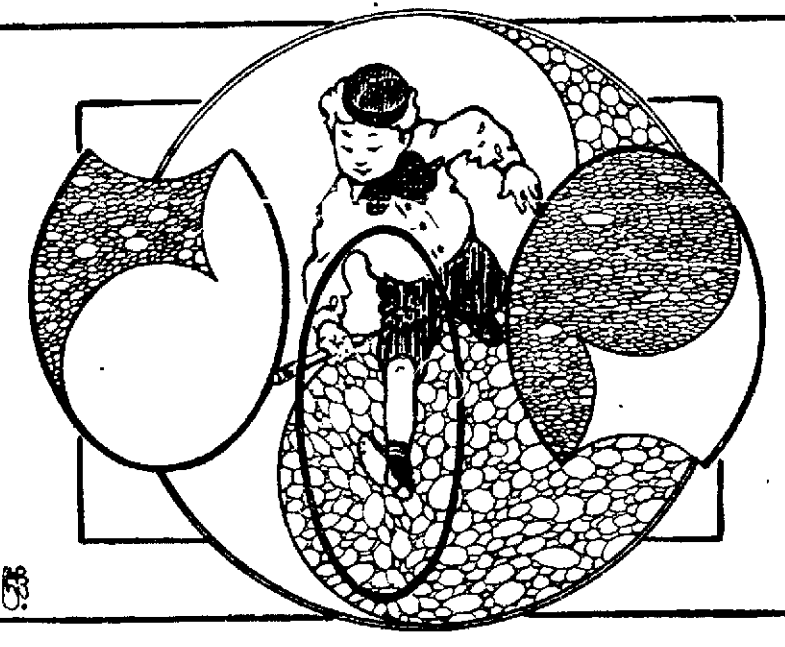

A Salamander.

A salamander is a round plate to which is attached a long handle. It is used to brown the surface of dishes that cannot be placed in the oven. Heat it red hot and then pass it over the top of the dish, being careful not to hold it too close or the surface to be browned will scorch. A very good substitute for a salamander can be made from an ordinary iron fire shovel.

Crepe Reveneece or Costard.

Boil one quart of milk. When cooled, pour it over four beaten eggs; mix well and strain it through a fine sieve. Add a tablespoonful of vanilla and four tablespoonfuls of sugar. Caramelize a mold and pour the mixture in. Set the mold in a pot of boiling water and let it cook slowly for thirty minutes, or until the mixture is thick. When done, let it get cold, then turn it out in a dish and serve. Of course, the flavor of all these sweet dishes can be changed as preferred.

The Puzzling Horseshoes

The two horseshoes on either side of the picture, when cut apart (separating the dark portion from the light), making in all four pieces, can be placed together so as to form a complete circle. For solution follow the diagram in the background of the picture.

INEXPERIENCED.

This kitten was ambitious,
But she didn't know a thing,
So she started in to eat a rat-tan chair.
After she recovered, she had another fling,
And she really caught a rat—but it was hair!

FOR FIRST SCHOOL DAYS

THE designs offered on this page are exceedingly becoming and practical for warm fall and first school days. They are all cut and made upon such simple lines that even a mother most inexperienced with the needle can venture upon their making with every assurance of success. Fashion is far less whimsical in her shaping of the clothing for the little ones than in the changing forms of their elders' gowns, and there is far less complexity in the trimming.

An exceedingly smart frock for the little maid is shown in the design No. 5843. It is a pretty little model and one of the best designs for a tub frock shown this season. The pleated front is in one piece from neck to hem, the full straight skirt being attached to the body portion at the sides and across the back, under a belt of insertion, which also outlines the V-shaped neck. The dress is of white pique, and may be worn over a gumpie or made over a high-necked lining, just as preferred. The mode is appropriate for linen, gingham, lawn, challis and mohair. For a child of seven years, 3½ yards of 36-inch material will be required.

Girl's Dress. No. 5843. Sizes for 3, 5, 7 and 9 years.

undeniable smartness and becomingness of the blouse modes for little girls make them general favorites. Few designs for the washable fabrics have met with the success this one has. The development was in Scotch plaid gingham. It consists of a kilt pleated skirt attached to a body lining, which closes in the back, and a full blouse waist. The modish elbow sleeves are finished by pretty turned-back cuffs, and a round collar completes the neck. Mohair, delaine, linen and pique will all make up attractively. For a girl of eight years, 4 yards of 36-inch material will be required.

Girl's Blouse Dress. No. 5826. Sizes for 6, 8, 10 and 12 years.

Nothing is smarter or in better taste for an every day dress than a pretty plaid gingham. Such a one is here shown in No. 5845. It is an excellent model for the washable fabrics, but will prove equally suitable for the light-weight woolsens. The waist is mounted on a fitted body lining, which may, however, be omitted if a gumpie dress is preferred. The square-cut neck and modish little sleeve caps are finished by bands of contrasting material. Chambray, pongee, challis, China silk, and mohair will all make up attractively. For a girl of eight years, 4½ yards of 36-inch material will be required.

Girl's Frock. No. 5845. Sizes for 6, 8, 10 and 12 years.

No better style for the little man of the family just at school age, can be found than this natty little suit of tan-colored serge. Strapped bands of broadcloth in a lighter shade outline the neck and front edges. The pattern consists of full knickerbockers and a long blouse that may be worn with or without the removable shield. The full bishop sleeves are gathered into straight wristbands. A belt of the material or a patent leather belt may be worn about the waist. The design is excellent for the washable fabrics, such as linen, gingham, pique and galeata. For a boy of 4 years 1½ yards of 54-inch material will be required.

Boy's Dress with Knickerbockers. No. 5835. Sizes for 2, 3, 4, 5 and 6 years.

The "Teddy Bear" emblem has now taken the place of the naval device on the sleeves and shields of the Russian blouse and sailor dress of both boys and girls. It is embroidered in colors that harmonize or contrast with the frock.
